OSHA PROPOSED HEAT INJURY AND ILLNESS PREVENTION RULE

Public comment period is open until December 30, 2024, on OSHA's proposed Heat Injury and Illness Prevention rule, which was published in the Federal Register on Friday, August 30th. OSHA's proposed rule would require employers to develop programs to protect their employees from heat hazards in both the outdoor and indoor work environments.

- The proposed standard would apply broadly to all employers conducting outdoor and indoor work activities in general industry, construction, maritime, and agriculture (where OSHA has jurisdiction).
- The proposed rule includes initial and high heat triggers at the 80- and 90-degree levels, which would require increasingly stringent control measures to protect employees.
- The rule also includes certain exemptions, including short-duration exposures, emergency response activities, and workplaces that are kept below 80 degrees.

•
Comments on OSHA's proposed Heat Injury and Illness Prevention rule are due by December 30, 2024. For additional information, resources, and background materials, please visit OSHA's heat rulemaking webpage.

SMALL BUSINESS CREDIT SURVEY

The Federal Reserve's 2024 Small Business Credit Survey is now open! Owners and key financial decisionmakers of for-profit businesses, take the survey to share your recent experiences about whether and how you use debt, what financial conditions you face, and more. Answers to these questions contribute to data that directly inform the Fed, federal government agencies, service providers, policy makers, and others - a public good ultimately benefitting your business and others like yours.

Take the 12 minute survey now.

The survey is open to businesses currently in operation, those recently closed, and those about to launch. All responses are confidential.

The survey closes November 1, 2024. Questions? Contact Hal Martin at hal.martin@clev.frb.org.
